English Everywhere Language Research Lab

The English Everywhere Language Research Lab (http://www.englisheverywhere.com) attempts to provide efficient solutions to language learners whose goal is to improve their English skills. Therefore, we provide various English programs, including English conversation, business English, English Test preparation courses, and exam preparation courses for entrance into specialized high schools.

‘Productive English, the ultimate goal of English Everywhere, is aimed at improving learners’ proficiency in speaking and listening. The English Everywhere Language Research Lab has developed specialized business skills courses, which includes: Basic Business Content, Negotiation, Conference and Meeting, Business Writing Skill, Presentation, and other business-related topics— for business people in order to assist in enhancing not only their productive English skills but also their professional business skills. We promise to be the stepping stone for you to step up to be fully qualified in this competitive global society.
EE Methodology:
Andragogical Approach & Productive English

All teaching follows some sort of pedagogy. However, pedagogy and adult learning (andragogy) are uniquely different. Pedagogy is driven by forward thinking and rote learning. Teachers are required to follow some sort of pedagogy in order to deliver information successfully with minimal control by the learner. Andragogy, however, allows educational freedom. Androgy encourages divergent thinking and active learning. Androgy encourages learner-oriented, continuous learning. In order to feel successful, it is important for adult learners to be independent and in control of their learning. Therefore, EE’s curriculum has been based on andragogy. The lessons have been designed to involve learners’ participation and engagement through task-based activities and opportunities to frequently interact in the classroom.

Language learners want to achieve communicative competence. However, English education in Japan has been rather focused on receptive skills of English—writing and reading—which just increase learners’ knowledge about language, not the competence to actually use the language communicatively. When L2 (second language learners) are well-equipped with productive speaking and listening skills, their English communication becomes more effective.

Using an andragogical approach enhances learners’ achievement in communication skills and, ultimately, their overall global competence. EE’s teaching philosophy is to pursue 'language for success'.

Methodology

Communication, and interacting with communication, is one of the most essential components of language acquisition. Successful communication occurs through interaction with well-trained teachers who are able to provide proper explanations appropriate to the learner. In order to implement successful communicative skills, The Communicative Language Learning (CLL) method was employed in the field of Second Language Acquisition. The CLL provides activities which are geared towards a pragmatic use of the language. The language needs to be authentic, functional, and meaningful. The design of Business Basics I has been based on this CLL method. English Everywhere aims at improving all learners’ communicative competence through the use of these CLL methods. Effective speaking, listening, and writing are considered to be our ultimate goals.

Course Objectives

This book, BUSINESS BASICS 1, has been designed to enhance workplace communication skills at by providing a variety of business activities in order to build global competency. This book also aims to help business learners improve their productive proficiency in English-speaking, listening, and writing. We strive to provide this productive proficiency through constant classroom interactions and systematic self-study. When students are given opportunities to experience a variety of meaningful business tasks, the learning is much more effective.
Introduction

Unit Composition

BUSINESS BASICS I consists of 16 units. Each unit is divided into two parts: class/pair work and individual work.

Class work
Warming-up Questions: Learners are presented with 2 or 3 questions that are related to the topic of the unit.
Dialogue: This section provides the content that meets the learners’ needs so that the learners can internalize the targeted expressions through repeated oral practices.
Useful Expressions: Sentences that contain useful phrases or expressions for the topic of the unit are provided.
Reading: Reading text provides in-depth information related to the topics. Learners can widen their business knowledge as well as their proficiency in reading comprehension and vocabulary.
Activity: As the key part of the lesson, this section is designed as teacher-independent so that it can provide learners with lots of opportunities to use the language which is meaningfully acquired or learned in that lesson, and encourages the learners to actively participate.
Discussion: Learners can widely discuss the issues related to the lesson topics.

Individual Work
Business Culture: This section contains a variety of information about worldwide business culture so that the learners can be ready for international business. 'Write Aloud', the sub-section of Business Culture, helps learners improve their writing, as well as to have the in-depth view of other cultures and gain a more objective view of their own culture.
Vocabulary: This section can be used as a reference of the Dialogue and Reading sections, and also as a vocabulary drill for self-study.

Here are Ten Commandments for the best results in language learning:
1. Fear not.
2. Dive in.
4. Seize the day.
5. Love thy neighbor.
6. Get the big picture.
7. Cope with the chaos.
8. Go with your hunches.
9. Make mistakes that work for you.
10. Set your own goals.

Cosmopolitan readers queue for Tube job

More than 1,400 readers of Cosmopolitan have applied to become a London Tube train driver. London Underground described the response to its single advertisement in this month's issue as 'exceptional.'

Successful applicants will have to get out of bed for regular 4:45 a.m. starts, but the £27,650 salary and up to eight weeks' holiday may prove sufficient compensation.

Lorraine Candy, editor of Cosmo, said the interest her readers had shown demonstrated that young women were not bound by traditional career patterns.

'It's always been a classic thing for boys to want to be train drivers. Now we're seeing that girls can do it too,' she said.

'I don't think the job is boring or unsexy and I'm sure the passengers couldn't care less whether the train is being driven by a man or a woman—as long as it's on time.'

The ability to break bad news to travelers more sympathetically is one reason London Underground is keen to increase its number of female drivers from 100—just three percent of driving staff.

Comprehension Questions

1. How many adverts did London Underground put in Cosmopolitan?
2. What are the advantages and disadvantages of the job?
3. What do passengers care about most?
4. Why does London Underground want to hire more women?

   h. working flexible hours (including weekends)
   i. a casual dress code
   j. uniforms

3. Which is more important to you: a. high salary or having a job you enjoy?

Business Culture

China: Interview Etiquette

• Your interview may be scheduled on a weekend, as some offices are open on Saturdays
• You may be greeted by a handshake, nod or slight bow to the head. Return the gesture that is initiated by the interviewer. The traditional Chinese greeting is a bow. When bowing to a superior, you should bow more deeply and allow him/her to rise first.
• Dress in appropriate attire for the industry to which you are applying. It is best to be slightly conservative (more formal) for the first interview. For males conservative suits and ties in subdued colors are the norm. For females, conservative suits or dresses are generally worn. A blouse or any other kind of top should have a high neckline. Neutral colors such as beige and brown are common.
Due to the emphasis on conservative, modest dress in Chinese business culture, flat shoes or very low heels are the main footwear options for women. High heels are acceptable at formal receptions.

- the interview: if you are presented with business cards, accept with both hands. Study it for a few moments before carefully placing it away. Do not hastily stuff a business card into your back pocket or write on someone’s business card, as this is regarded as highly disrespectful.
- be aware that in China, it is perfectly acceptable to ask people questions about age, income, marital status or related subjects. If you do not wish to answer personal inquiries, side-step these questions as graciously as possible. Regardless, do not express annoyance, outrage or similar feelings that will cause the questioner to 'lose face'.

Unit 02

Organization

Learning Objective
After studying this unit, you will be able to.....

• describe the activity/staff of a department
• describe the equipment/premises of a department

Warming-up

* Describe the picture in 1 minute using your own words.

1. How many departments are there in your company?
2. On average how many people are there in one department?
3. Does your company have overseas branch offices?
   If yes, where?
The structure of Biopaints International

Presenter: Today we are talking to Philip Knight about the structure of Biopaints International. Philip is the General Manager of the Perth factory. Philip, do you think you could tell us something about the way Biopaints is actually organized?

Philip: Yes, certainly. We employ about two thousand people in all in two different locations. Most people work here at our headquarters plant. And this is where we have the administrative departments, of course.

Presenter: Well, perhaps you could say something about the departmental structure?

Philip: Yes, certainly. Well, now first of all, as you know we've got two factories, one here in Perth, Australia, and the other in Singapore. Lee Boon Eng is the other General Manager, over there in Singapore.

Presenter: And you are completely independent of each other, is that right?

Philip: Oh, yes. Our two plants are fairly independent. I mean, I am responsible to George Harris, the Production Manager, and we have to co-operate closely with Rosemary Broom, the Marketing Manager.

Presenter: Mmm, yeah.

Philip: But otherwise, as far as day to day running is concerned, we're pretty much left alone to get on with the job. Oh, and I forgot to mention finance. The Finance Director is Weimin Tan. She's a very important woman. And her task is to make sure the money side of things is OK. The accountant and such people, they report to her directly.

Presenter: Is that all?

Philip: Oh, no, no. There's Personnel too.

Presenter: Oh, yes.

Philip: That's quite separate. Deirdre Spencer is Personnel Manager. And the Training Manager reports to her, of course.

Presenter: Are there any other features worth mentioning?

Philip: There's the planning department—Brian Jones is in charge of that. And a purchasing department—they buy in the materials for production.
Comprehension Questions

1. What is Philip Knight's job?
2. How many employees does Biopaints International have?
3. According to Philip Knight, they have two factories. Where are they?
4. To whom would the accountant directly report?
5. To whom would the Training Manager report?
6. What department is Brian Jones in charge of?

Dialogue Practice

Practice the conversation below with your partner.

A: Well, perhaps you could say something about the departmental structure?
B: Yes, certainly. We've got two (factories), one here in (Perth, Australia), and the other in (Singapore).
A: And you are completely independent of each other, is that right?

Sysco

Sysco makes over 4,500 products, developed specifically for customers - food retailers and foodservice providers. As such, Sysco makes and markets products for some of the largest restaurants and hotel chains in Canada.

Company Structure

Sysco operates a decentralized divisional structure. The board establishes corporate strategy and the Group's business objectives. Divisional management integrates these objectives into divisional business strategies with supporting financial objectives.

Managing Directors are responsible for the organic and new business development growth opportunities within their divisions. These divisions are composed of three to seven business units – grouped by a mixture of market, manufacturing skills or customer expertise.

Each business unit is led by a General Manager, responsible for the achievement of business objectives and sustainable business performance. Each General Manager has a profit-responsible management team which concentrates on specific markets and customers.

This devolved Group structure allows a close working relationship with our customers and one where day-to-day decisions can be made at business unit level, which is vital to the fast-moving nature of our business.

Each Managing Director, together with functional heads, sits on the Sysco Management Board (operational executive team).

Comprehension Questions

1. What are the Managing Directors responsible for?
2. How many business units are there in the divisions?
3. At which level are the day-to-day decisions made?
4. Who sits on the Sysco Management Board?

Unit 03

Business morality

Learning Objective
After studying this unit, you will be able to.....
• give opinions about business ethics and framework
• discuss the advantages of a company in behaving ethically

Warming-up

* Describe the picture in 1 minute using your own words.

1. What do you think is the purpose of a business?
   Is it just to make money?

2. Rank the professions below according to how ethical you think they are.

| accountant | civil servant | lawyer | police officer |
| banker     | estate agent  | nurse  | teacher       |
| car sales executive | journalist | dentist | taxi driver |
Interview with Clair Bebbington, External Affairs Manager for a division of British Petroleum.

Interviewer: Why should companies be ethical or what are the advantages of a company in behaving ethically?

Claire: Mmm, I think the whole issue of ethics is a very complex one. Companies are made up of people. Multinationals are made up of many different nationalities. I think that companies are part of society and as such they should reflect society's standards. Companies, especially multinational ones, do have responsibilities in the world and should try to be positive influence and I think if a company is not ethical, then it will not survive as a company.

Interviewer: Should a company have a code of ethics?

Claire: I think, from my point of view, it's useful on two counts. Firstly, it makes a commitment to certain good behavior and so it's a way of communicating the importance of good behavior to all of its employees and partners. Secondly, if a company has a code of ethics and spends time communicating it, it does actually contribute to it's ethical behavior. If you express these things in writing, especially, then you can be held accountable for them. This tends to mean that you are much more likely to act on them as well. I think following up that code is difficult. People tend to have different ethical standards, and defining the term 'ethics' can be a problem. But I think generally to express what your ethics are is a positive thing to do.

Interviewer: What kinds of moral dilemmas do large companies face? Can you think of any examples?

Claire: I think if you were to look at any company's ethical code, you would usually find in it a section about offering bribes and this can be an area where people can get themselves into hot water. Facilitation payments are part of doing business in many countries, and bribes are something which most companies are not going to want to get involved in. But when does a facilitation payment become a bribe? And that is a question that can be quite difficult to answer.

Britain Moves Higher In Bribery League

From Roger Boyes in Bonn

Britain is seen as more corrupt than seven other European countries, including Germany, according to an authoritative annual league table released yesterday by the Berlin-based Transparency International group.

Transparency International is a private group, set up in 1993 to fight corruption, and bases its information on seven international surveys of business people, political analysts and the public.

The cleanest countries this year were Denmark, Finland and Sweden, which moved New Zealand from the top position. Britain came relatively low, in 14th position, its image apparently damaged by stories of sleaze. It was overtaken by Germany, although the Germans still tolerate companies which hand out bribes to foreign contractors.

Germany has been under pressure, especially from the United States, to plug legal loopholes which allow German businessmen to write off bribes abroad against tax. Yet both Britain, and even the United States, which has strict legal barriers against international bribery, are behind the Germans. In part, this is probably because of the nature of the survey, which does not track such areas as company-to-company bribery.
The most corrupt countries this year are regarded as Nigeria, followed by Bolivia, Colombia and Russia. Pakistan has improved its position, earning only one out of ten for honesty last year but 2.53 this year. The chairman of Transparency International, Peter Eigen, issued a warning against focusing on Third World corruption.

'Corruption is perceived to be greatest there, but I urge the public to recognize that a large share of the corruption is the product of multinational corporations, headquartered in leading industrialized countries, using massive bribery and kickbacks to buy contracts in the developing world and the countries in transition.' The Third World, in other words, would be less corrupt if developed states stopped offering bribes.

Indeed, the most revealing standings are buried deep in the table. Belgium, for example, is now regarded as more corrupt than Mediterranean nations such as Portugal, Spain and Greece.

'Every day that the poor scores in the Corruption Perception Index are not being dealt with means more impoverishment, less education and less healthcare,' said Dr. Eigen. Money was diverted from development into over-priced contracts.

A study by Harvard associate professor Jim Allen found that a rise in corruption levels had the same effect on foreign investments as raising the marginal tax rate by more than 20 percent. 'Awareness is a first step to fighting or reducing corruption,' he said.

Comprehension Questions

1. Which countries are regarded as the most corrupt countries?
2. Which country was in the top position of the cleanest country last year?
3. According to the article, what are the results of corruption?
4. Where does Transparency International get its information from?
5. According to Peter Eigen, what information is missing from the survey?

Profit or principle?

Nikos Takakis is the CEO of Livewire, an Australian manufacturer of electrical appliances. During the last three years, his General Manager Carl Thomson, has turned Livewire around from being a loss-making company into a profitable organization with an exciting range of new products. Both men want the company to grow as fast as possible.

Problems

Valerie Harper is Personal Assistant to Carl Thomson. Valerie joined Livewire just over a year ago. In the beginning she was considered to be an outstanding employee. However, more recently she has been having difficulties working with Carl. They have been seen shouting at each other, and often Valerie appears upset when leaving his office. Nikos has received the following memo from Valerie.
MEMORANDUM
PERSONAL AND CONFIDENTIAL

To Nikos Takakis
From Valerie Harper
Date 2 July
Subject Complaint about Carl Thomson

I would like to make a formal complaint about Carl Thomson’s unprofessional behavior.

1. Mr. Thomson has been putting pressure on me to have a personal relationship. When I showed no interest he became aggressive and unpleasant. He gives me too much work, sets impossible deadlines, and criticizes me in front of the other staff.
2. Mr. Thomson gives orders to me rather than polite instructions. He never encourages or praises me. I think he would like to hire a new Personal Assistant who would be more ‘friendly’ to him.
3. He has frequent long lunches with female staff. He returns to the office late in the afternoon, then expects me to work overtime (unpaid) in the evening.

I feel that unless the situation improves, I shall be unable to continue working for the company.

That evening, Nikos Takakis found out that Carl had advised a friend to buy shares in Livewire just before it announced excellent annual results. The share price rose sharply and the friend made a quick profit.

Task
Role play. You are a member of Livewire’s board of directors. Hold a meeting with your instructor to discuss these issues.

1. What is the best way to deal with the bad relations between Valerie Harper and Carl Thomson?
2. What action should you take concerning Carl’s behavior?
3. What action should you take concerning the possible leak of information?

2. Do you agree with this statement? Give your reasons.

“If we face a recession, we should not lay off employees. The company should sacrifice a profit. It's management's risk and management's responsibility. Employees are not guilty; why should they suffer?”

3. Which is worse in your opinion—to offer or to accept a bribe? Why?

Business Culture

Guatemala: Business Ethic and Framework

Many newcomers to Guatemala are surprised by the openness and frankness of their Guatemalan counterparts. Personal relationships are very important, and Guatemalans often treat business partners as respected friends whom they try to make as comfortable and relaxed as possible. The phrase No tengo pena (don't worry) is commonly heard, as Guatemalans strive to set others at ease in both business and social situations. Honesty, hard work, and personal honor are traits Guatemalans admire and strive to include in any business deal. Direct criticism of a person or of a person's job or business is considered impolite. Avoid being openly critical of anyone, even your competitors. In Guatemala, the value of the relationship is directly proportional to the frequency of visits. At the very least, you should have an on-site Guatemalan representative for your business venture. Ideally, visiting business people should visit the country several times to show how much they value doing business in Guatemala.

Managing people

Learning Objective
After studying this unit, you will be able to……..
• talk about a colleague you work(ed) with
• complain about a manager

Warming-up

* Describe the picture in 1 minute using your own words.

1. Have you ever had a difficult boss?
2. What do you like most about your manager or boss? Why?
3. What do you like least about your manager or boss? Why?
4. What do you think is the most important quality that a manager should have?
John Burnham is a property developer. He is talking about a colleague he worked with.

Marion: John, you don't like your colleague. Why is he so difficult to work with?

John: He doesn’t know how to motivate staff. The atmosphere in the office is really bad. He is very rude to customers and colleagues. We have had lots of complaints about his behavior.

Marion: How does he manage his staff?

John: Very badly. He doesn’t know how to manage people. He doesn’t support his staff at all, and he blames everyone else for problems.

Marion: How long has he been with the company?

John: Well, he has worked with me for five years.

Marion: What is he good at?

John: Well, he is very punctual. And he is very practical, too.

Marion: Is he still with the company?

John: No, he’s not. He recently shouted at a customer in the office. Because of that, has to go; the company just fired him.

Son Tan is a management consultant in Thailand.

In order to be good managers of people...

I think good managers need to be good at four things. First of all, they need to be good at observing—that's so they can understand the behavior, the strengths and weaknesses of their staff. The second thing is that they need to be good at listening—so they can learn about their staff's problems. The next thing is, it's important for them to be good at asking questions—so they can find out all the information they need to make the right decisions. And finally, they have to be good at speaking so they can communicate their objectives clearly to all their staff.

Qualified and skilled international managers are...

If you manage international teams, then it's really important to spend enough time preparing yourself for managing those international teams. Learn as much as you can about their language, their culture and the local conditions. And you also need to spend plenty of time with the local people. Don't try to be an expert in the first three months or so. You should take time to observe and to learn and ask questions.

Mistakes that foreign managers make when managing Asian staff are...

Some international managers want their Asian staff to be more forceful. Another thing is, they want them to be able to deal with problems logically. And they want their staff to be ambitious like them. Sometimes background, education and cultural differences between themselves and their staff are ignored. They may underestimate the skills and abilities of their local staff because they are focusing too much on their weaknesses. The managers have a tendency to jump to conclusions too quickly, and they tend to label all local staff as being the same.

A people problem

Buffet Inc., a US food company, opened a restaurant chain in Germany last year. Sam Benett is the head of the Stuttgart office and Lincoln Davis is its business manager.

The problem

Lincoln is ambitious and hard-working, and he speaks four languages. But he does not get along with Sam or the office staff in Stuttgart.

- Lincoln often wants the staff to stop their work and help him.
- He entertains customers a lot and spends too much money.
- Lincoln seldom attends meetings. He says, 'I was with a customer.'

Lincoln is unhappy and is thinking of leaving the company. Last week, he had a meeting with Sam. After the meeting, he wrote an e-mail to Sam:

As I said in our meeting, I work long hours every day and most weekends. Our customers say I do an excellent job, but you and the staff are not helpful.

Yesterday morning, for example, I was late. But the night before, I worked until 2 in the morning. You criticized me in front of the office staff.

I need more help to do my job.

Task

You are a director from head office, visiting Stuttgart.
Read your role cards and discuss the problem. Agree on one of the following solutions. - Try to get Sam and Lincoln to work together successfully. - Move Sam or Lincoln to another part of the company. - Ask Lincoln to leave the company.

1. What qualities and skills should a good manager have? Choose the six most important things from the list.

To be a good manager you need to:

a. like people
b. enjoy working with others
c. give orders
d. listen to others
e. make suggestions
f. judge people's abilities
g. plan ahead
h. be good with numbers
i. make good presentations
j. be persuasive

2. If you are managing people from different cultures, what other qualities and skills do you need?

Business Culture

Hong Kong

Hierarchy is very important in Hong Kong business culture, regardless of the size or nature of the company. A clear line of authority is essential in any office, otherwise only confusion and resentment will likely occur.

Although the office hierarchy is determined by position, the age and gender of the employees are also important factors. Even if you are inclined to be democratic, paying close attention to the hierarchy is essential.

Hong Kong employees are keenly aware of the duties that are appropriate to their position in the office hierarchy. You must exercise caution when delegating tasks of any kind, since asking an employee to do something that is regarded "beneath" or otherwise "outside" his or her station can be a grave breach of protocol. Usually, an inappropriate request will be quietly ignored, since reacting with indignation is discouraged. When in doubt, pass all of your orders through your administrative assistant in the Hong Kong office and/or the department heads. They will know what to do to preserve the dignity of all concerned.

There is a strong authoritative structure demanding impartiality and obedience. Even if you prefer a relaxed and informal management style, the staff will consider the divide between you and them as being important. Compliments, as well as pleasantries such as "good morning" and courtesies such as "please" and "thank you", are always welcome, but over-familiarity will make it difficult to maintain your authority. Criticism of any kind should be delivered gently and discreetly; it is more effective if sent through the proper channels.

An interview with Marjorie Scardino, Chief Executive of the media group Pearson Place.

Interviewer: Marjorie Scardino, you are leading one of the top companies in the UK, and you've been voted businesswoman of the year. What qualities do you need to run a large company effectively?

Marjorie: Well, I think different companies probably require different qualities, but for me there are only a few simple qualities that cut across all requirements, and those are courage and imagination and empathy. By empathy, I mean, having the ability to put yourself in other people's positions and understand how they feel about situations and ideas.

Interviewer: Which business leaders do you admire and why?

Marjorie: I think the best business leaders are probably ones we don't know about…not the stars we read about in the newspapers. I think they're probably the ones who have great business ideas and have seen them through to fruition. So the business leaders I most admire right now are those managers in Pearson who are achieving our goals of double-digit earnings growth.

Interviewer: What do business leaders actually do?

Marjorie: My staff would probably say this was a really excellent question they ask themselves every day! I think what they do is just what I've said the business leaders I admire do. They create a business idea, and they see it through.

Interviewer: As a leader, how do you motivate your employees?

Marjorie: I'd like to think we motivate each other. I think my job is to make sure the company has a purpose, because I think people like to work for a company that has a reason for being, that they can identify with and feel good about. I think that I have to communicate well with them everything that's going on—and everything I'm trying to do—in a clear way. And then in return I think they inspire me to think more adventurously and to think more carefully about how to stimulate them and how to build a better business. So it's a sort of a circular operation.

Interviewer: Do you think leaders are born or made?

Marjorie: I think it's probably a bit of both. All human beings obviously are born with certain qualities, and certain genetic traits. But I've seen so many people in my life who have, using those basic qualities, re-invented themselves several times as they've gone into new situations. You know, you're a certain kind of person when you're in school, and your friends know who you are, and you get slotted in. And then as you grow up, you go into new situations and become somebody else.
So people who were never leaders in school become the great business leaders of our time. So I would have to say, mostly it's made, but you also have to use what you're born with.

Chief Executive's ideas about how to raise motivation and morale
1. Build moral through teamwork outside the office—in sports activities. Form company teams for soccer, squash, basketball, etc. Get employees to participate in inter-company competitions, e.g. athletics, swimming events and so on.
2. Introduce regular staff meetings which will enable staff at all levels to participate in decision-making.
3. Set up regular small-group meetings to share ideas, develop plans and help prepare budgets.
   Also, start an 'Employee of the Month' scheme. Everyone has to nominate someone, giving reasons why they should be nominated.
4. Encourage staff through meetings and a newsletter (to be edited on a monthly rotating basis by different senior managers) to give ideas and suggestions. There would be cash rewards for the best ideas.

5. Set up a profit-sharing scheme for all employees related to increased productivity and profits.

6. Cancel the end-of-year bonus scheme. Spend some money instead on a spectacular Christmas dinner and party at a luxurious hotel.

7. Organize one-to-one meetings with senior managers to build morale and generate ideas. Agree targets and objectives with senior managers, who share them with other staff members at regular seminars.

8. Have an open-door policy in every store. Employees can see the manager whenever they are available.

9. Create career development plans for all staff, which would involve consultation with each employee.

Task

1. Work with your teacher. Choose five ideas from the Chief Executive's list which you think would be worth implementing. Note down the reasons for your choices.

2. Discuss your ideas, giving reasons for your choices. Then, try to agree on the five best ideas (from the Chief Executive's and your own list) which should be put into effect.

The New Leadership

In the twenty-first century, managers looking to get ahead will need a completely different set of skills. Technology, products, markets, and customers are changing fast, and corporations will need managers that can handle uncertainty. These leaders will also need the ability to work as part of a team, have concerns for the needs of employees, and also have a sense of humor.

In order to survive, corporations will have to establish an increasing number of partnerships with suppliers, distributors, and their most important customers. Leaders will have to rely more than ever on their staff to act independently to maintain these relationships.
As a result, they will also need to build a different kind of relationship with the people who work for them: one based on trust, rather than seniority. The best leaders will favor a team-based approach to management.

In addition, skilled employees will be more in demand, so they will be freer to come and go as they please. Managers will have to make more of an effort to attract new talent and to respond to the needs of their existing employees. Listening skills and a desire to help people could well become important qualities in a successful manager. Also, increased globalization will require sensitivity to other people's traditions and languages.

Comprehension Questions

Match the beginnings of the sentences with the correct endings to create a summary of the article above.

| 1. Managers will need to be able to handle uncertainty | a. because they will depend on them more. |
| 2. They will need a different relationship with employees | b. in order to respond to the needs of their staff. |
| 3. They will need good listening skills | c. because the business world is changing very fast. |
| 4. They will have to be sensitive to other cultures | d. because more business will be done with international partners. |

Discussion

1. Which modern or historical leaders do you most admire? Why?
2. What makes a great leader? Discuss the characteristics.
3. Are there differences between men and women as leaders?
4. Are people who were leaders at school more likely to be leaders later in life?
5. What makes a bad boss? Discuss some factors.
6. What is the difference between a manager and a leader?

“Fast-Tracking” Employees: A Smart Move

The appointment of Carly Fiorina as president and CEO of Hewlett-Packard is an example of two major trends in corporate America. First, female executives are gradually rising to the top. Second, companies tend to hire top managers from outside rather than promote from within the company.

“Very few American companies train employees well enough to become leaders of the company,” says William C. Byham, author of the book Grow Your Own Leaders. Some companies do have a list of possible employees for top jobs, but they fear that these people do not have the skills or training to take over if a key person leaves. Others have great hopes for some employees, but don't tell them.

Byham says that upper management must be strongly committed to developing its own leaders. That in itself can be a problem because some managers don't want to train people to take their place. According to Byham, it is important to identify several people for the “fast track,” and give them assignments what will develop their management skills. And finally, it is important to make sure that people who are on the "fast track" know that they have a place in the organization's future.

[Talking about stress at work]

The major causes of stress at work are (increasing job security/working long hours/working with a difficult boss).

To cope with stress, you have to find out the main reasons and possible solutions.
Professor Cary Cooper is a well-known authority on stress management.

Major causes of stress
The major causes of stress at work today are firstly, increasing job insecurity. Due to the recession, many people these days feel they could lose their jobs, and they don't feel their jobs are safe. They feel they may not have a job next month or next year. Secondly, working long hours is becoming common across the world. There are problems with how much time people are spending at work compared to the time they spend at home, what is called the work-life balance, and how to get this balance right. In many countries, around the world, the typical family is a working family, with both members working, which causes problems for those families. So, working people really are experiencing problems which maybe 40 or 50 years ago they didn't have.

How to cope successfully with stress
For people to manage stress successfully, they first have to find out the main reason for it. For example, are they stressed because the company they work for has a habit of working long hours which is causing problems in their personal life? Or is it that they have a boss who gives them orders all the time and doesn't give them freedom or independence to organize their own work? Or is it that they are women and they work for a company which makes it difficult for women to make progress in their career, or to get promoted because the company is not flexible in its working arrangements? Each of these problems needs a different solution, so it's important for people to find out what their particular problem is and then once they've done this to think about the possible solutions.
Comprehension Questions

1. According to Professor Cooper, what are the two major causes of stress at work?
2. What did he say about problems 40 or 50 years ago?
3. Choose the examples of stress which Professor Cooper mentions.
   a. long hours
   b. too much paperwork
   c. not enough breaks during working hours
   d. a difficult boss
   e. transport problems going to and from work
   f. lack of promotion opportunities for women

Genova Vending Machines

Genova Vending Machines (GVM) is part of a multinational company, based in Zurich, Switzerland. GVM merged with another company 18 months ago. As a result of the merger, the management:

• cut the workforce by 15%.
• introduced open-plan offices.
• proposed that salary payments and staff recruitment should be done by outside companies instead of by the Human Resources (HR) Department. If this happens, there will be redundancies in the department.

Most staff are now worried about job security and morale is low. In particular, staff in the Human Resources Department complain of being overworked and severely stressed. Absenteeism is high and several staff have recently resigned.

Task

1. You are a member of the group of consultants studying the problems in the HR Department. Discuss the following questions.
   - Which problems do you think are the most serious?
   - What should the management do to solve the problems?

2. Work out an action plan to reduce the stress in the HR Department.
1. What would you do?
   a. Suppose your boss wanted you to spend your summer vacation taking an English course. What would you do?
   b. Suppose your company gave you a large sum of money to invest in your department. What would you spend it on?
   c. Suppose someone offered you a job in Saudi Arabia at twice your present salary. Would you take the job?
   d. Suppose the job were in the USA. What would you do?
   e. Suppose you wanted to start your own business. What sort of business would it be?

2. Which of the following business situations would worry you most? Why?
   a. You read in the paper that your company will probably be merging with another company.
   b. You keep your job after a merger, but you are in a less powerful position.
   c. Your company has to relocate to the other side of the city.
   d. You are asked to relocate to an exotic foreign country.
   e. You are promoted but are now in charge of a hostile workforce.
   f. You have to decide who to make redundant in your new department after a merger.

Business stress levels 'double'

Stress levels among the world's business leaders have doubled over the last year, a survey says. Taiwan is top of the stress table for the second year running, with 90% of respondents feeling more pressured, said business advisers Grant Thornton.

57% of all business owners globally reported higher stress levels compared to 39% in 2004. Just 6% of the 7,000 businessmen and women questioned said that their stress levels had gone down. After Taiwan, China, the Philippines, Botswana, Hong Kong, Singapore, and South Africa led the countries with the most stressed-out business leaders. Grant Thornson said "without a doubt" the least stressed business people in the last year were to be found in Europe and the US, although stress levels there also rose dramatically.

Members of a planning group discuss relocating their head office.

Smith: We need to decide exactly when we're going to move. Any suggestions?

Mark: I think July would be the best time. It's very quiet then, isn't it?

Smith: You mean, we don't do too much business then.

Mark: Exactly. Our sales are always down that month and quite a few staff are away on holiday. We could move all the office equipment at the weekend. Do everything at once. That's the best way…

Smith: I think we should take longer to move. A weekend's too short. In my opinion we should do it department by department.

Mark: How do you mean, exactly?

Smith: Well, each week a different department would move. That way, there would always be people here who could handle customer enquiries, phone calls, and so on.

Mark: Hmm, I see what you mean. Maybe it would be better to phase the move over several weeks. Of course, we'll have to keep our staff informed at every stage of the move. We can do that mainly by internal e-mail. Now, moving on to the question of transport. We've contacted two companies, National Transport and Fox Removals.

Smith: Sorry, could I just comment on that, Mark?

Mark: Certainly.

Smith: I don't think it would be a good idea to use National. I've heard one or two things about them. I don't think they're too reliable. But Fox would be fine. They've got an excellent reputation in the trade.
Mark: OK, perhaps it would be better to use Fox then. You know, there's another possibility. We could get our own people to do the moving.

Smith: What? You think our transport department could do the job?

Mark: Why not? They're not too busy in July.

Smith: I don't think that's a good idea. This is a really big job. We need a specialized firm for that like Fox. They've got the experience and will do a good job, even if it does cost us a bit more. Also, Fox offers a free consultation service.

Comprehension Questions

1. What does Mark think about the best time for moving?
2. Why doesn't Smith agree to use National for transport?
3. What does Fox offer for free?

Brazil tries to kick-start tourism

By Geoff Dyer

Brazil has everything to offer visitors: 7,300 km of coastline, much of it empty, endless beaches; the planet's biggest rainforest; an area of wetlands full of alligators and jaguars; colonial cities and spectacular waterfalls.

The Bahia coast in north-east Brazil is a particularly attractive area for tourism. Several luxury resorts have been built there. Recently a $170 million five-hotel complex at Sauipe opened. With its 18-hole golf course and designer shops, Sauipe is hoping to attract rich, foreign visitors.

The tourist industry had problems in the past because of high inflation which led to short-term planning. Hotels, however, are long-term investments, often with payback periods of over 15 years.

If resorts such as Sauipe are going to attract significant numbers of tourists, they have to solve several problems.

For a start, Brazil needs cheaper and more frequent international air travel. Brazilian airlines have actually decreased the number of scheduled international flights in the past two years because of a currency devaluation.

Foreign visitors also demand a level of service that needs lengthy training—a considerable task for most of the resorts in the northeast which do not have a well-educated population to provide suitable staff.

The other big challenge for Sauipe's managers is to avoid the social problems that other new resorts have caused, when large numbers of people have come from the interior in search of jobs, quickly creating slums.

The resort is hoping to deal with these pressures by setting up courses in the surrounding villages for making handicrafts which will be sold at Sauipe and by organizing credit for local cooperatives to produce foodstuffs for the hotels.

Some people believe that the developers have not planned the new resorts properly. 'Sauipe is a resort without adequate infrastructure, training or planning about how the industry will develop,' says Mario Beni, a professor of tourism at the University of São Paulo.

Often created in the middle of nowhere, he says, many of these resorts have poor transport links and no local tourism or sports facilities to take advantage of. 'It is time to stop and think about these grand projects,’ he adds.

Not true, replies the Bahia state government, which claims to have spent $2.1 billion over the past decade on basic tourism infrastructure, from roads to airports to sanitation.

Comprehension Questions

1. Where is the Bahia coast?
2. What does Sauipe offer to attract visitors?

MARCIA LEE JEANS

Marcia Lee Jeans is based in Toronto. Its brand is well known in Canada. In the next 10 years, Marcia Lee plans to expand in America, Europe and Southeast Asia. To do that, it has decided to build its factory in an overseas country. The factory will have approximately 2,000 workers who will produce the jeans.

The company is considering two countries as a location for the factory. There is some information about each country below.

Task

You are a member of the planning committee which must choose a location for the new factory.

1. Study the two countries and choose a country according to its suitability as a location.
2. Decide which is more suitable location for the new jeans factory.

Q: Which country is more suitable for the location of the new jeans factory?
A: I think ( ) is better because…
COUNTRY A

Economy
- Growth rate: 2% per year
- Inflation rate: 5%
- Interest rates: 10%-15%
- Unemployment rate: 25%-30%
- The country has a lot of debt and is trying to modernize its economy.

Transport
- Good rail network but poor roads.
- New international airport.
- The main seaport is in poor condition.

Labor
- Unskilled labor available. A lot of training needed for jeans production.
- No unions in most industries.
- Wage rates: very low.

Comments
The country has a military government. Bribery is common. Political problems: the people in the north want to become an independent state. The government will contribute 30% towards the cost of a new factory.

COUNTRY B

Economy
- Growth rate: 4% per year
- Inflation rate: 5%
- Interest rates: 8%-12%
- Unemployment rate: 12%
- Government encourages the privatization of industry.

Transport
- Road and rail network is in poor condition.
- Government has started a big investment program for the transport system. It will take 5-10 years to complete.

Labor
- Large supply of skilled workers, but they are not used to working long hours.
- Strong unions.
- Wage rates: low.

Comments
A lot of paperwork is required for new businesses. There are problems with air and water pollution. Profits are tax free for the first three years after a factory has been built. Companies must pay 5% of their profits into a fund for training their workers.

Discussion

What conditions are important for people starting new businesses? Choose the three most important from this list and compare them with your partner. Can you think of any others?

| low taxes | good transport links |
| skilled staff | training courses |
| low interest rates | high unemployment |
| cheap rents | a strong currency |
| stable economy | government grants |
Business Culture

Culture: the key to business in China

While on business in China, your local interpreter brings ice cream to your hotel while you're working late at night because you mentioned that you like it. This might seem strange, but in China it just means you're a valued guest.

Queensland-based Solutions Development Corporation International (SDC) Director, David Denham noticed that such attention to detail is characteristic of the Chinese marketplace.

"Knowing about Chinese culture and business practices, and being prepared to translate everything really makes a difference. You also have to know about the Chinese Special Economic Zones," he said.

You have to find the right government official who will spend a lot of time with you because they are looking to invest. They like it when you are prepared to work with them and to share information and experiences.

In what sounds like an epic tale, Mr Denham and his associate, Dr Kewu Li were in Hong Kong before visiting Jiangmen when they got a call to meet Dr Li's former university professor across the border in Shenzhen at 6am the following morning.

Professor Wang had arranged a meeting with a Beijing government representative with family ties in Shenzhen. This connection was very important for SDC.

"All of our presentations and handouts were in Chinese. We also learnt that getting an early signature is very important - otherwise there is no commitment, even just to talk again," Mr Denham said.

There’s a lot of opportunity if you don't try to tackle the big cities first. The army and the government owns a lot of the factories and there are opportunities for companies from other countries if they target the smaller contracts that competitors like the bigger US companies won't touch.

Write Aloud

Becker: Oh, that's all right.

Santinelli: Did you receive our January shipment?

Becker: Yes, we did.

Santinelli: When did it arrive?

Becker: Er... it arrived on the... 25th of January.

Santinelli: Are all the things you ordered included?

Becker: Yes, thank you, yes.

Santinelli: Did you get the invoice as well?

Becker: Yes...yes.

Santinelli: And, er, have you paid the invoice for the last shipment yet?

Becker: I'm afraid we haven't managed...

Santinelli: Because I haven't got a record of the payment and our department was just getting a bit worried about it.

Becker: Yes, money is very tight at the moment, you see.

Santinelli: Of course.

Becker: I'd like to ask for an extension of credit.

Santinelli: Ah.

The Wall Street Crash

The stock market crash in the United States in 1929 was huge and it led to a severe and lasting economic crisis around the world. Many bankers and industrialists lost their money and reputations. Some went to prison and others committed suicide.

Share prices on the New York stock exchange had begun rising in 1924, and in 1928 and 1929 they rocketed to unbelievable levels. In spring 1929 there was a break in the rising prices when the Federal Reserve Bank said it might raise interest rates to slow down the boom.

However, a major bank, the National City Bank, assured investors that it would continue to lend money to them at affordable rates.

Soon the market took off again. People could buy stock for 10% of its value and borrow the remaining 90%. The lending rate varied from 7% to 12%. Almost everyone was optimistic. One economist, at the peak of the boom, said that people generally agreed 'stocks are not at present overvalued.'

It all ended on 21 October, 1929. The market opened badly and there was heavy selling. Confidence in the market disappeared. There was a rumor that the big bankers were getting out of the market. Share prices fell dramatically and kept on falling. The boom was over. But its consequences would last for years to come.

Comprehension Questions

1. After the stock market crash, what happened to bankers and industrialists?
2. When did the share prices on the New York stock exchange began rising?
3. When did the boom end?
4. What happened to the share prices?

You are a director of Valentino. Meet to discuss your investment plan.

1. Decide how to spend the £ 1.5 million. Make your investment plan with reasons for your choices.
2. Present your ideas

Discussion

1. Do you:
   a. give money to beggars?
   b. give money to charities?
   c. give away used items, such as clothing?

2. If you go out for a meal with someone you don't know well, do you:
   a. offer to pay the whole bill?
   b. suggest dividing the bill into equal parts?
   c. offer to pay the whole bill but expect them to pay next time?
   d. try to avoid paying anything?

3. What do you think about people who do not pay the correct amount of tax? Is this:
   a. a serious crime?
   b. morally wrong but not a crime?
   c. excellent business practice?

4. If you lend a colleague a small amount of money and they forget to pay it back, do you:
   a. say nothing?
   b. remind them that they owe you money?
   c. arrange to go for a drink with them and say you've forgotten your wallet or purse?
United Kingdom: Borrowing money

Most people who have a problem with cash flow phone the bank and ask for an overdraft. It is quick and easy, but it is not always cheap.

Instead of an overdraft, why not arrange a personal loan? An overdraft is really a short-term measure for one or two months, but a personal loan is often a better idea because the repayments are structured over a pre-arranged period.

If you see something you want in the shops, there is usually not time to ask your bank for a loan, so you can use a credit card. Buying on credit is expensive, but there are some good offers.

Customers with incomes of more than £25,000 can benefit from gold charge cards. These are not credit cards, but payment cards for shops and restaurants, etc. They are useful if you want a large sum of money quickly, but the amount you borrow must be repaid by a pre-arranged date.

Store cards are generally more expensive than other credit cards, and can only be used in the shops which offer them.

What are some positives and negatives of using credit cards?

ARGENTINA: LET'S MAKE A DEAL!

- Third party introductions are often a necessary prelude to doing business in Argentina.
- In Argentine business culture, interpersonal skills such as the ability to 'fit in' and maintain cordial relations with the group are sometimes considered as important as professional competence and experience. Moreover, establishing rapport and friendship remain key to conducting business and effective problem-solving.
- Argentines generally converse in closer proximity. Adapt to this practice—it may be taken personally if you back away from someone.
- An initial visit should be made by an upper-level executive, accompanied by mid-level executives. Mid-level executives will attend subsequent visits to conduct negotiations that go into greater depth.
- Displaying kindness and respect towards other people are valued qualities, and there is a tendency to avoid aggressive behavior. It's important to be empathetic in your dealings.
Moreover, you will find that expressing concern for the country's welfare and the Argentines you deal with is an appreciated gesture.

• In negotiations, feelings sometimes take precedence over facts. Among Argentines, perceptions of the truth can be subjective and personal. Catholic values have had a profound influence on their thinking.

• Generally, contract agreements are followed rigidly, problems are resolved swiftly, and payments are made promptly on the deadline.

Telephone conversation between Sales Director Martin, and his sales Manager, Fiona.

Fiona: Hello.
Martin: Hi, Fiona. This is Martin. How are things going?
Fiona: Fine, thanks.
Martin: I haven't received your sales report yet for the quarter. Any problems?
Fiona: Oh, no. Sorry, Martin. I've been really busy lately. But I can tell you, we've had excellent results.
Martin: Good.
Fiona: Yeah. We've met our sales targets and increased our market share by two percent. Our total sales were over $1.2 million.
Martin: Over $1.2 million. Great! Well done! What about the new range of shampoos?
Fiona: Well, we had a very successful product launch. We spent $30,000 on advertising it and…
Martin: Sorry, did you say $13,000?
Fiona: No, $30,000. We advertised in the national press, took out space in trade magazines and did a number of presentations to our distributors. It was money well spent. We've had a lot of orders already and good comments from customers.
Martin: I'm really pleased to hear that.

Selling dreams

Ferrari, Italy’s maker of sports and racing cars, is among the three most recognizable brands in the world. The company got its high profile among the world’s corporate giants without the help, for most of its existence, of an advertising department. Only as recently as 1993 did Ferrari create a marketing department. 'Just parking our exciting automobiles is enough to draw the crowds,' writes Gian Luigi Longinotti-Buitoni, the author of a book called Selling Dreams.

Customers are now spending more money on products they desire rather than on products they simply need. All companies must therefore produce goods of very high quality. More importantly, they must establish a brand for years to come by giving it emotional qualities that match customers' strongest desires. Like Ferrari, all companies must create and sell a 'dream.'

Longinotti-Buitoni gives some interesting statistics about markets for luxury goods worldwide:
Switzerland, with 220 Ferraris sold in 1997, is the largest market per capita for the car maker's products; the company, on the other hand, sells only 2.7 percent of its cars to women; Rolex and the highest number of luxury watches are sold in Italy, while Japan has been consistently the leading market in the world for leather goods from Gucci, Ferragamo, Hermès and Louis Vuitton. China, amazingly, appears to be drinking a lot of Hennessy cognac.

Task

One of you is a salesperson (turn to page 127). The other is the customer (turn to page 127).

1. Read your role cards. The salesperson talks to the customer and helps him or her choose a phone.
2. Share which package(s) you sold and bought.

Discussion

'The four Ps' form the basis of the marketing mix. If you want to market a product successfully, you need to get this mix right.

• Product: goods or services that are sold
• Price: the cost to the buyer of goods or services
• Promotion: informing customers about products and persuading them to buy them
• Place: where goods or services are available

1. Think of some products you have bought recently. Why did you buy them?
2. Which of the four Ps influenced your decision to buy?
3. Which of the following statements do you agree with?
   a. People remember advertisements not products.
   b. Advertising raises prices.
   c. Advertising has a bad influence on children.

Business Culture

Marketing Across Cultures

There is a story often told about General Motors, who tried to sell their Nova model car in Latin America only to find out that "nova" literally means "it doesn't go" in Spanish.

But cultural awareness in marketing is a lot more than careful translation. There are many more subtle differences between cultures. For example, colors that seem attractive in one culture may be unattractive or tasteless in another. Schedules, transportation, and everyday routines differ widely. And the simplest cultural differences can upset the greatest plans.

In Japan, for example, a US household products company spent millions of dollars on a marketing campaign to introduce its laundry detergent. Nevertheless, sales were very low. In fact, few stores even stocked the soap. The reason? The typically American "large, economy-sized" boxes were far too big for the Japanese market. The product required too much space to stock and the boxes were very heavy to carry.

In Europe and in much of Asia, product comparisons in advertising are not accepted or allowed. Declaring that one soft drink tastes better than another, or that one automobile is more dependable than another, could be met with distaste or even legal action. Many cultures prefer a more humble approach and consider American advertising too loud and aggressive. US companies doing business overseas may find that an approach that emphasizes company longevity and reputation may work better.

1. Do you get nervous when you talk in public?

2. How often do you give a presentation?

3. What is the most important thing when preparing for a presentation?
A group of management trainees are talking about the preparation of presentations.

George: Now let's think about the preparation for the presentation. What do you have to prepare for it?

Sara: The most important thing is to know about the audience, find out about…

Luigi: Yes, but you need to make sure of your objectives first, so decide on the objectives—what you want the talk to achieve.

Sara: Yes, but to do that, you need to know about the audience—their knowledge, what they want to know, everything like that.

Luigi: Yes, all that's important…

Hal: Yes, true…

George: So, audience and objectives.

Others: Yes / right / okay.

Hal: Then the third thing is you have to go through the content, gather information, organize it, decide on a structure.

Sara: Yes, get a good structure, I agree. Then once the structure is okay, you need visuals, any graphs and that sort of thing…

George: Yes, the visual supports.

Sara: Then, well, you could write it all out. At least the introduction—just to practice it. Some people write out everything, some don't. It depends.

George: Yes, I think that's a good point. But practice is really very important. A key part of the preparation is to actually practice it, to give the presentation practice… until you could do it just from notes. Then, what else?

Luigi: Check all the language, keep it simple, make sure there's no mistakes on the visuals. Spelling and all that.

Hal: And I think you should check that the room is okay and the equipment.

George: Yeah… imaging, no slide projector, or….

Sara: Or the overhead hasn’t got a bulb in it.

Pamela Pickford trains business people to make presentations.

The key is preparation. So the first step is to find out who you're going to be presenting to. Now you need to do this on two levels. Firstly, how much does the audience know about the subject? Are they experts or do they know very little? Secondly, are you presenting to a group from the same or from different countries?
If possible, visit the room where you'll be giving the presentation beforehand and organize it precisely to your own requirements. Check that you're familiar with the equipment, re-arrange the seating, and try to make yourself feel comfortable and relaxed in it.

So once you know who you're presenting to and where, you're ready to start preparing what exactly you're going to say. Stage one is the opening—those all-important first few moments that can make or break the presentation. Then stage two, a brief introduction about the subject of your talk. Thirdly, the main body of the presentation, and fourthly, the conclusion which should include a summary of your talk and your final opinion or recommendations. Finally, the question and answer session.

Now the most important stage is the opening minute or so and I'd suggest that people memorize it exactly as if they were actors. Write down the opening with all the pauses and the stress clearly marked, and then record it, listen to it, and practice it again and again. This is so important because if it's properly done, not only do you get the audience's attention immediately, but you feel confident during what can be the most frightening part of the presentation. After that, you can start using your notes.

So the first step is to write those notes. Write the whole presentation out just like an essay. Then select the key points. But read the full version over and over again until it's imprinted on your mind. The next step is to buy some small white postcards and write no more than one or two of the key points or key phrases onto each one.

Now visual aids, like overhead transparencies, are very important of course. But most people put too much information on them. Don't because it's difficult to read and it bores the audience. Limit yourself to a maximum of five points on each. Remember to turn off the projector when you're not actually using it. And don't talk to the machine, or the transparency, which again, lots of people do. Face the audience at all times.

Finally, remember that it's not just what you say. How you say it is just as important. Quite unlike meetings and negotiations, a good presentation is very much a performance.

Reading

To meet or not to meet... That’s the question!
The biggest waste of time is meeting when it's not necessary. You'd be surprised by how many of your weekly meetings can be eliminated when you decide to meet only when it’s absolutely necessary. Here are some tips for deciding if a meeting is worth your time:

1. Has a goal been set for the meeting?
   Is there a purpose for meeting, a goal to achieve? Every meeting should have an objective and if the one you've been asked to attend doesn't, consider recommending that a memo or e-mail be sent instead.

2. Has an agenda been created ahead of time?
   An agenda is the basis for an effective meeting. Creating and distributing the meeting agenda one or two days before the meeting begins gives participants an opportunity to prepare for the meeting. Having an agenda during the meeting also focuses the discussion and helps your group stay on track.

3. Will the appropriate people be attending?
   If the appropriate people aren't present, then important decisions get put on hold. It will also take time to update key individuals on what took place in the meeting they missed. It's better to put the meeting on hold until all of the right people can be in the room.

4. Could the information be covered in an e-mail or memo?
   The purpose of most meetings is sharing information and updating others. If possible, make an effort to substitute these types of meetings with an e-mail or memo! Simply send one e-mail to all the people who would have attended the meeting. This will save everyone time, they'll still be up-to-date on what's happening and they'll be grateful for having one less meeting to attend that week.

Comprehension Questions

1. If there are no goals to achieve, what alternatives does the author recommend instead of holding a meeting?

2. To give participants an opportunity to prepare for the meeting, what should you do one or two days before the meeting begins?

3. If the purpose of the meetings is sharing information and updating others, what would be a good substitute for these types of meetings?

Australia: Welcome topics of conversation

- Australians find arguments and opinionated conversation entertaining, so don't hesitate to express your views if they are sincere and informed. It is common for Australians to make provocative statements during conversation and it is expected that such provocation is responded to with humor.
• Australians like to criticize themselves, but they are not receptive to criticism from others. This can put you in a difficult position, especially if the conversation shifts to animated denunciations of Australia and Australians. Should you show any signs of agreement, abuse will likely be heaped upon you and/or your home country.

• Don’t boast about yourself or your company’s accomplishments. Instead, Australians prefer to judge your competence and abilities through your actions.

• Australians try not to draw too much attention to their academic qualifications or personal achievements. It is perceived to be arrogant or ‘showing off’ to talk about your own accomplishments. People who make a lot of references to their education and other professional qualifications in conversation may be subject to teasing. The ‘tall poppy syndrome’ means that Australians often avoid standing out or being a ‘tall poppy’, as they will not be respected by others.

Jan: Ok, what do you need to know?.

Irena: I am sure we can do a good job.

Jan: Yeah, but you will have to give me some idea about amounts or quantities, because that way it is easier to get it through our organization, you know. They need sometimes time, but if they know something about quantity, they will be more interested.

Irena: Well, I can't say exactly. They depend on price and quality.

Jan: Oh, yes, of course.

Irena: If you like, I'll send you a fax and I shall be very open.

Jan: Er… yes.

Irena: I can put in writing to you, that, say, in quantity terms, that we can take two thousand depending on the price and quality. And then if you come back to me by fax, I can tell you in my fax what I think. And I can tell you, if your quality is not good and your prices are not competitive, then that'll be the end of our business.

Jan: Sure, of course, I understand. But if the quantity is interesting, I am sure that our organization…

Irena: In that case.

Jan: Mrs. Eichelberger… I’m sure we can be flexible, because we need, and want figures, or quantities.

Irena: I, that is, we are not talking less than one thousand tons…

Jan: Good.

Irena: I am ready to say even a minimum of one thousand tons…

Jan: Yes, good.

Irena: But what if the matter is pushed through quickly? Will everything be OK?

Jan: Yes, of course.

Irena: Perhaps things will move too fast for you and then maybe we'll find that the prices you are quoting us are much too high and the quality is not good and then…

Jan: And then you will have to tell us.

Irena: Yes, then maybe we will stop the order, I tell you, because of that.

Jan: Yes, I see.
Comprehension Questions

1. Who is the salesperson and who is the buyer?
2. Which market are they talking about?
3. What kind of information does Jan need from Irena?
4. What will Irena do after the telephone conversation?

Dialogue Practice

Practice the conversation below with your partner.

A: You will have to give me some idea about (amounts or quantities).
B: Well, I can't say exactly. That depends on (price and quality).
A: Oh, yes, of course.
B: If you like, I'll send you a fax.

Useful Expressions

[Starting]

- Could we begin now please?
- OK, let's get started, shall we?

[Refusing an offer]

- I'm sorry, we can't accept that.
- I'm not sure about that.

[Exploring positions]

- What do you have in mind?
- How would you feel about a bigger discount?

[Accepting an offer]

- I think we can agree to that.
- That sounds reasonable.

[Making offers and concessions]

- If you order now, we'll give you a discount.
- We'd be prepared to offer you a better price if you increased your order.

[Playing for time]

- I'd like to think about it.
- I'm sorry, but I'll have to consult my colleagues about that.
[Checking understanding]

When you say there are delivery problems, what do you mean?
Have I got this right? You said a discount on an order of 1000.
If I understand you correctly…

[Closing the deal]

That's it, then. I think we've covered everything.
Great! We've got a deal.

Learn about different styles of negotiators

Win-lose negotiators tend to view negotiation as competition. Their counterpart is their opponent and like in sports, must be regarded as an adversary at the negotiating table. In fact, some people could refer to win-lose negotiations as those who like to play "hardball" not "softball." These "hard ballers" are usually unwilling to compromise their position in any way and will try to make their opponents back down rather than making a deal. By limiting the options available, win-lose negotiators tend to feel that they have gained the advantage in the control of a negotiation process. The key to successful negotiating, especially with a person like this, is being willing to walk away from an idea or even a job.

Conversely, advocates of the win-win style see negotiation as a cooperative and collaborative process. Communication is important to win-win negotiators because it allows them to better understand their counterpart’s position. With this understanding, win-win negotiators can find alternative solutions that may benefit all of the involved parties. Because they don't view negotiation as competition, negotiators who favor this approach seek to satisfy their interests as well as their counterpart's to the highest degree possible. This results in a better long-term relationship between them and lays the groundwork for future cooperation.

Comprehension Questions

1. How do win-lose negotiators tend to view the negotiation process?
2. Rather than making a deal, what do "hard ballers" usually try to do?
3. What is the key to negotiating with "hard ballers"?
4. How do win-win negotiators tend to view the negotiation process?
5. Whose interest does a win-win negotiators seek to satisfy?
Activity

Role play this situation:

One day employees found that staff prices had risen by over 50% in the restaurant they work. This is because the company had stopped subsidizing all employee drinks and meals. Their union representative meets the general manager to discuss the situation.

You can be either:

Person A
The union representative (turn to page 130)

Person B
The general manager (Turn to page 130).

Task

1. Negotiate employee prices in the restaurant.

Discussion

If you encountered each of these people below in a negotiation, what would you think of them? How would you react to them?

1. Someone who interrupts while others are talking.
2. Someone who always goes um…er…’ and hesitates.
3. Someone who speaks incredibly fast without pausing for breath.
4. Someone who speaks very loudly.
5. Someone who speaks so softly or quietly that others can hardly hear them.
6. Someone who says nothing and expects others to do most of the talking.

Business Culture

Negotiating Styles

Australia

Australians generally do not like negotiating or high-pressure sales. Be direct and don’t go into too much detail. Don’t try to impress Australians with your expert knowledge. Before you begin business negotiations, spend some time making small talk.

Finland

In Finland business people often begin negotiating right away, without small talk. Finns can be very quiet and there are often long silences in business meetings. Look people in the eye when you speak to them.

Malaysia

In Malaysia you should speak and behave quietly during business negotiations. Always stay calm. Leave plenty of time for someone to respond to a statement you make. It is polite to leave a pause when someone has finished speaking.

Mexico

Personal friendships are important in business in Mexico. Mexicans are looking for long-term relationships based on trust so you should spend some time building these relationships. Mexicans often avoid saying "no." "Maybe" or "We will see" may actually mean "no."

Write Aloud

What is your negotiation style? What do you do to persuade others?

Unsuccessful product launch

Tom: I'll never forget the trouble we had with that face cream. We launched it and you know it was a real winner. I mean, it was going really well.

David: Hmm, great.

Tom: When suddenly people started phoning and complaining it was burning their skin.

David: Burning their skin? You mean, like a kind of allergy.

Tom: Yeah, it was making red marks on their faces. The newspapers heard about it and wanted to know what we were doing about it.

David: Huh, typical. They don't exactly help, do they? So what did you do?

Tom: We didn't know what to do. You see, we'd tested it for over six months, and there'd been no bad reaction to it.

David: So what was the problem?

Tom: Well, we'd invested a lot in the product and the launch. I mean, you know what advertising costs are these days, then suddenly the number of complaints doubled in the space of a week or so.

David: Doubled? Incredible? Did you manage to keep it quiet?

Tom: No, our Managing Director got more than a bit worried. Said all this was harming the company's image. So we recalled the product and lost a lot of money. I tell you, the only people with red faces were us. Since then, we've kept away from skin care products.

Comprehension Questions

1. What did customers complain about?
2. How long had the company tested the product before they launched it?
3. How did the company deal with the problem?

MEMO

To: Dan Johnson, Personnel Director
From: Jacques Lafont, Union Organizer
Subject: Staff morale
Date: March 18

Staff are very unhappy with the present changes.
As a result, productivity has fallen and staff turnover is high. Let me summarize some of the reasons for the staff's low moral:

1. Factory inspections: American managers are always checking up on us and taking notes. No one knows why they are doing this or what they are up to.

2. Redundancies: Since June, about 60 employees from the Development Department have lost their jobs. They were given no reasons. The staff thinks this is unprofessional.

3. Further changes: People are looking for new jobs elsewhere. They want to move before they are pushed. People are afraid that the new management will relocate both factories.
4. Management style: Staff constantly complains about the silly changes new management makes. I enclose a list of comments made to me by our members.

- They're trying to do everything too fast—a new computer system, learning English, and maybe other languages, new product ranges, new customers.
- There was a family atmosphere before. The management really cared about us. Everything 'was more informal.'
- We don't know where the company is going now. We have no idea what our strategy is, what 'our objectives are.'
- 'We get e-mail messages from Dallas telling us what to do. Surely they can trust the management over here to make the policies and decisions?'

Comprehension Questions

1. What are American managers doing?
2. How many employees from the Development Department have lost their jobs since June?
3. What are the main complaints about the management style?

Activity

Western Airport: Complaints about the restaurant and bars

The restaurant and bars are run by Airfare, a food company which has a five-year contract with Western Airport. The restaurants and bars are used by four types of customers: business people, tourists, airport employees, and groups (sports teams, clubs, associations, etc.)

Complaints made by customers were as follows:

1. The restaurant menu is unimaginative. The main dishes are either steak, ham or chicken. Surely the airport can do better?'
2. Airport staff, who use the restaurant frequently, say the meals are too expensive.
3. Smoking areas are not large enough, and there is no clear division from non-smoking areas.
4. Passengers can't relax because they don't know when they have to board their planes.
5. There is nowhere for passengers to put their hand luggage. 'I was afraid someone would steal it, so I couldn't enjoy my drink.'
6. The bar staff look unhappy and overworked. Some are rude to passengers. 'Bar staff seem to expect a tip after serving every drink.'
Task

You are a representative of one of the following:

• The Customer Relations Department of Western Airport
• Airfare, the food company

1. Consider the complaints and come up with ideas for dealing with them.
2. Hold a meeting. Decide what action to take to improve customer service. The meeting should be led by the manager of the Customer Relations Department.

What would you do:

1. if you saw two colleagues having an argument?
2. if a colleague criticized you?
3. if you saw a colleague stealing something?
4. if your boss never listened to your idea?
5. if your boss asked you to work until midnight?

Iran: Let's Make a Deal!

• Always come to Iran knowing two things. Your success is defined by your ability to build effective personal relationships, combined with a clearly outlined and well-presented proposal.

• Building a relationship with your Iranian counterpart(s) is critical. The first meeting should be focused solely on getting to know each other. Once a relationship has been established, you can safely move on to business matters.

• Iranians are astute businesspeople. They enjoy haggling and getting concessions, so be prepared for long negotiations.

• Decision making can be slow. It is most likely that you will meet and negotiate with less senior members of a family or state department at first. Once you are seen as trustworthy and your proposal financially viable, you will then move on to meet more senior members.

• When negotiating, Iranians will start at extremes in order to gauge your response. Prior to negotiations, know your target figure and work slowly towards it through meaningful concessions. When conceding, ensure you present this as a favor and a decision made out of respect and liking for your counterpart(s). Try and concede only once you have gained agreement on a reciprocal concession on a separate or related issue.

• Do not use deadlines or pressure tactics, as this can backfire. Be patient.

Reading

Read this extract from a training manual and then discuss the questions below:

Twelve telephone tips
1. Email ahead if you want to make sure the other person has time to prepare for the call.
2. Make sure you have with you all the documents you’ll need before you dial the number.
3. The other person may not understand you easily, so try to speak slowly and CLEARLY.
4. The other person can’t see your reactions, so always CONFIRM that you have (or have not) understood each point that’s been made. Don’t pretend you understand if you don’t.
5. The other person can’t see what a nice person you are, so make sure you sound POLITE and AGREEABLE.
6. The other person hasn’t got all day, so make sure your call is BRIEF.
7. The other person is getting an impression of your business while talking with you, so make sure that you sound EFFICIENT – your business’ image may be at stake, even if you’re just taking a message.
8. Don’t rely on your memory: make notes during a call and rewrite those notes immediately afterwards as a record of the call.
9. Smile while you’re talking. Your listener can ‘hear’ your smile.
10. Don’t try to be funny – you may be misunderstood.
11. Don’t interrupt the other person: let them finish speaking before you say what you need to say.
12. Send a follow-up fax or email to confirm any important details (especially prices and numbers), so that you both have a written record of them.

Comprehension Questions
1. Is it OK to bring needed documents after dialing the number?
2. Should you take notes during a call instead of relying on memory?
3. True or False: You don’t have to smile because the other person can’t see you.
4. When should you interrupt the other person when they are talking?

Switzerland

First Name or Title?

Addressing others with respect

- You should always address Swiss adults by their professional or courtesy title followed by their surname until invited to address them by their first name.
- The order of names given on introduction is the same as in North America, with the first name followed by a surname.
- In German-speaking Switzerland, use the courtesy titles Herr to address a man and Frau to address a woman; in French-speaking areas, use Monsieur and Madame; in Italian-speaking areas, use Signore or Signora.
- You should be aware that Frau, Madame, and Signora are increasingly used as a mark of respect for a woman’s professional and social standing, not as a statement of her marital status, and that Fraülein, Mademoiselle and Signorina are now used almost exclusively for addressing female children, teenage girls, and young women.

Good to know

Read the facts below then discuss with your teacher.

Fact: 88% of your customers who stop using your services and/or products do so because of perceived employee indifference or rudeness. One of the most common ways customers interact with employees is over the telephone. Therefore, having an understanding of telephone etiquette will make a giant difference to your company’s customers and profits. Your reputation for service depends on how well staff handles incoming and outgoing calls. 86% of the message customers receive over the telephone is through the tonality of the voice they hear. Only 14% of the message they hear are the words used.

Telephone etiquette is an effective public relations tool for creating a positive telephone experience for your company’s customers.

Comprehension Questions

1. Why is it so important to ensure customer phonecalls are courteous?
2. How is body language similar to tone of voice?
3. How do you typically talk to customers and coworkers over the telephone?

Isabelle: Larry, could you tell me a little about New York?
Larry: Sure. What would you like to know?
Isabelle: Is it expensive?
Larry: It depends. What is your budget?
Isabelle: $250 a day. How much is a hotel room?
Larry: Between $150 and $300. How many days are you staying there?
Isabelle: Three.
Larry: Where are you working?
Isabelle: At the Rockefeller Center—it is located at 5th Avenue and 51st Street.
Larry: Of course. But Rockefeller Center is a business center.
Isabelle: Go to a restaurant, go swimming, or maybe go to the ballet.
Larry: There are some great restaurants in New York and there is usually a ballet at Lincoln Center. Choose a hotel in that area.
Isabelle: Where is that?
Larry: Midtown. Just off Central Park.
Isabelle: That’s dangerous, isn’t it?
Larry: Not at all. During the day it is full of people having lunch, jogging, horseback riding.
Isabelle: Where can I find a list of hotels? Is there a guide?
Larry: There are several. I’ll lend you one.
Isabelle: What about getting around?
Larry: Don’t use the subway. It’s not very safe or clean. There are lots of yellow cabs.
Isabelle: Thanks for your help.
Larry: It’s a pleasure.

BUSINESS TRAVELER PREFERENCES VARY WIDELY WORLDWIDE, ACCORDING TO AMERICAN EXPRESS BUSINESS TRAVEL RESEARCH

Smooth Sailing: Business Travelers Ponder the Perfect Business Trip

When asked what they would consider to be the most enjoyable part of a business trip, 27 percent of respondents identified meetings with colleagues and/or clients as most enjoyable, followed closely by 25 percent for the flight to their destination, 24 percent for their hotel stay and 23 percent who cited the return home.

When evaluating the most irritating factors of traveling on business, the majority of travelers found travel delays to be the most irritating (52%), followed by poor hotel accommodations and boarding/deplaning (9%), and getting behind in office work (7%).

While on business travel, travelers occasionally have the opportunity to partake in leisure activities. Fifty-one percent of interviewees said that sightseeing was their most relaxing activity while traveling on business, followed by 28 percent who pointed to socializing with colleagues and clients and 15 percent who identified shopping as the most relaxing activity. In particular, 79 percent of Chinese business travelers found sightseeing the most relaxing thing to do while on a business trip. A high percentage of Norwegian travelers (59%) prefer to socialize with colleagues or clients.

Overall, 47 percent of those surveyed said they always bring back gifts for family, friends and/or loved ones when returning from business trips, led by 78 percent of Chinese business travelers who said they always come home with a gift.

How to Behave Appropriately on a Business Trip

Whether this will be your first or your thousandth business trip, you should be conscious of conduct that is considered proper during your absence from the office. As a representative of your company, you need to know how to behave appropriately on a business trip.

1. Pack all essential items in a carry-on bag to avoid being ill-prepared for business if the airline loses your luggage. Showing up for a trade show or a meeting with a client dressed in yesterday’s clothes will not make a positive impression.

2. Dress professionally during the entire trip. Your attire should reflect the fact that you are on a business trip, whether you are on a plane, on a golf course or in a conference room.

3. Be prepared and be on time. You may normally arrive at the office at 8:10 every morning and not speak until after your first cup of coffee, but clients will not take kindly to your decision to be 10 minutes late for an important meeting and still need to go over your notes.

4. Use proper business language. Even though some business trips may include more casual situations, such as lunch, dinner or even golf, keep in mind that you are still representing your company, and like the old saying goes, "Loose lips sink ships."

5. Brush up on table manners and the basics of business etiquette before you go. This may help you avoid an embarrassing gaffe while on your trip.

6. Save all receipts from your trip so you can easily determine your expenses when you return.

7. Conduct yourself with grace and decorum at all times. If you are uncertain about these terms, consider buying a book on business etiquette for some light reading while on the plane.

Reading Individual Work

Banker swaps rat race for bus lane

A bank manager has given up his $75,000-a-year job with NatWest to realize his childhood ambition of becoming a bus driver.

Despite the $20,000 salary and anti-social hours, John Burgin, 48, has never been happier. 'Banking was a career but in the end it became just a job,' he said. 'Once I knew I was leaving, I used to go outside at lunchtime and watch as the buses drove up and down. The time had come.'

His passion was awakened as a boy growing up in Sheffield, where he collected bus maps and time-tables. But Mr. Burgin, from Nailsea, near Bristol, went on to spend nearly 30 years working his way up through NatWest.

'The levels of stress are totally different,' he said. 'At the bank, things were very political. I worked hard all day then took work home, and it never really finished. There is stress in driving a bus around Bristol, but it's a different kind and I don't take it home.'

Comprehension questions

1. What job did John Burgin used to do? What does he do now?
2. How much did he earn? How much does he earn now?
3. What did he collect when he was a child?
4. Why is his new job less stressful than his old one?

B: Well, we had a very successful product launch.

Reading

Swiss watch

Between the mid-70s and 1983, the Swiss share of the global watch industry fell to just 9 percent. Foreign competitors dominated the market. Then Swiss watch manufacturers decided to work together and sell under one brand name. They introduced the Swatch brand in the early 1980s and saved the industry. Sales rose steadily, and by 1993, the Swiss share of the global watch industry was up to 55 percent.

Honda motorcycle

In the late 1950s, a Honda sales team went to America to introduce the company's big motorcycles. The US market for large motorcycles was already dominated by an American company. But there was hope for the smaller bikes. So the team changed direction and sold small bikes instead. The strategy was a success.

Comprehension questions

1. How did Swiss watch makers increase their market share?
2. What happened after they introduced the Swatch brand?
3. What did Honda want to sell in the US at first?
4. Why did Honda change its strategy?

It's Time to Try Videoconferencing

Thanks to videoconferencing, attorneys Fred Parnon and George Pratt have become "virtual" partners in Parnon's office. Two years ago, Parnon set up a videoconferencing system between his New York City office and Pratt's suburban home, so that Pratt could avoid the long commute into the city. The partners keep the system on all the time. "It's as if we're in the same office with our desks touching," says Parnon. "I miss him when it's turned off." The technology "lets us see each other's face and hand gestures, which gives us much better communication than we would have just talking on the phone," says Parnon.

More and more small business CEOs are using this increasingly affordable and available business tool. Apart from reducing travel, videoconferencing systems have other useful features. For example, using a function called a shared whiteboard, participants at great distances can work on the same document at the same time, or see the results instantly on their computer screens.

While videoconferencing is not yet as quick and easy as a telephone call, analysts say the day is quickly coming. So along with your cell phone and beeper numbers, e-mail address, and fax number, you might also need to put your videoconferencing station number on your business card.

Comprehension questions:

1. Why did Parnon and Pratt set up a videoconferencing system?
2. Why does Parnon prefers videoconferencing to the telephone?
3. If more people use videoconferencing, what would they need to put on their business card?
